

---

Contents

---

|   |    |
|---|----|
| Introduction . . . . .   | xi |
| Chapter 1. An Overview of the Tourism World . . . . .                    | 1  |
| 1.1. Presentation of data and criticisms . . . . .                              | 2  |
| 1.1.1. Development of statistics . . . . .                                      | 2  |
| 1.1.2. Limitations induced by these sources . . . . .                           | 2  |
| 1.2. A hierarchical world . . . . .   | 6  |
| 1.2.1. Disparities . . . . .  | 7  |
| 1.2.2. Paradigms in action: wealth of nations, distance and otherness . . . . . | 9  |
| 1.2.3. Toward a multipolar world . . . . .                                      | 11 |
| 1.2.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 15 |
| 1.3. Touristic mobility: tourists conquering the World . . . . .                | 15 |
| 1.3.1. Places, a social construction . . . . .                                  | 16 |
| 1.3.2. Diversity of biophysical worlds . . . . .                                | 18 |
| 1.3.3. Variety of human constructs . . . . .                                    | 19 |
| 1.3.4. Attendance modalities . . . . .  | 21 |
| 1.3.5. Social scales . . . . .  | 21 |
| 1.3.6. Conclusion . . . . .   | 22 |
| 1.4. Constraints on the movement of tourists opposed by the worlds . . . . .    | 22 |
| 1.4.1. Combination between the unequal wealth of nations and distance . . . . . | 22 |
| 1.4.2. The heterogeneity of the world . . . . .                                 | 25 |
| 1.4.3. Tensions . . . . .   | 26 |
| 1.4.4. Health and biophysical risks . . . . .                                   | 30 |
| 1.4.5. Risks of everyday life: accident situations . . . . .                    | 32 |
| 1.5. Tourist traffic . . . . .  | 34 |
| 1.5.1. By means of globalization . . . . .                                      | 35 |
| 1.5.2. By means of mediation . . . . .  | 36 |
| 1.5.3. By means of the mobilization of skills . . . . .                         | 37 |
| 1.6. A question of method . . . . .   | 38 |
| 1.6.1. Method based on the analysis of tour operators' catalogs . . . . .       | 39 |

---

|   |           |
|---|-----------|
| 1.6.2. A method not free of bias . . . . .  | 40        |
| 1.6.3. A method with many limitations . . . . .                                     | 41        |
| 1.7. Conclusion . . . . .   | 42        |
| Chapter 2. North America . . . . .   | 43 |
| 2.1. A continent with a high level of touristicity . . . . .                        | 43        |
| 2.1.1. A population that is not very dense but with a high departure rate . . . . . | 43        |
| 2.1.2. Hierarchy of States . . . . .  | 45        |
| 2.2. Touristcity of the places . . . . .  | 46        |
| 2.2.1. To the east, the cities are dominant . . . . .                               | 46        |
| 2.2.2. To the west, natural parks: a level playing field with cities . . . . .      | 50        |
| 2.2.3. A confidential space for indigenous nations . . . . .                        | 52        |
| 2.2.4. A typology of tourist places. . . . .  | 53        |
| 2.3. Societal practices . . . . .   | 56        |
| 2.3.1. European society practices . . . . .   | 56        |
| 2.3.2. Practices of new North American societies. . . . .                           | 59        |
| 2.3.3. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                 | 59        |
| 2.3.4. World connectiveness of North American places . . . . .                      | 60        |
| 2.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 61        |
| 2.5. Atlas . . . . .  | 62        |
| Chapter 3. Central America . . . . .   | 67 |
| 3.1. Southern part of the North American tourism area. . . . .                      | 67        |
| 3.1.1. A politically fragmented region . . . . .                                    | 67        |
| 3.1.2. “A continent in the grip of violence” . . . . .                              | 69        |
| 3.1.3. Tourist hierarchy of States . . . . .  | 69        |
| 3.2. Touristcity of places . . . . .  | 73        |
| 3.2.1. Seaside region . . . . .   | 73        |
| 3.2.2. A region also dedicated to discovery . . . . .                               | 75        |
| 3.2.3. Costa Rica, a special case . . . . .   | 77        |
| 3.2.4. Typology of tourist places. . . . .  | 78        |
| 3.3. Societal practices . . . . .   | 81        |
| 3.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .                              | 81        |
| 3.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                 | 82        |
| 3.3.3. World connectiveness . . . . .   | 83        |
| 3.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 84        |
| 3.5. Atlas . . . . .  | 85        |
| Chapter 4. South America . . . . .   | 89 |
| 4.1. Overall, not very touristy . . . . .   | 89        |
| 4.1.1. Far from the center and a sparsely populated continent . . . . .             | 89        |
| 4.1.2. Hierarchy of States . . . . .  | 92        |

---

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| 4.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .   | 94         |
| 4.2.1. Atlantic Coast . . . . .   | 94         |
| 4.2.2. The Andes and the southern cone . . . . .  | 95         |
| 4.2.3. Tourist suburbs of the continent . . . . .   | 99         |
| 4.2.4. Typology of tourist places. . . . .  | 101        |
| 4.3. Societal practices . . . . .   | 104        |
| 4.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .                                    | 104        |
| 4.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                       | 106        |
| 4.3.3. World connectiveness of South America's tourist attractions . . . . .              | 106        |
| 4.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 107        |
| 4.5. Atlas . . . . .  | 108        |
| Chapter 5. Central and Northern Europe . . . . .                                   | 115 |
| 5.1. Northern margin of a very touristic continent. . . . .                               | 115        |
| 5.1.1. World Region, the birth of tourism . . . . .                                       | 115        |
| 5.1.2. Hierarchy of States . . . . .  | 116        |
| 5.1.3. Three models of tourist space. . . . .   | 117        |
| 5.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .   | 117        |
| 5.2.1. Large cities, the main object of discovery . . . . .                               | 118        |
| 5.2.2. Play . . . . .   | 122        |
| 5.2.3. Typology of tourist places. . . . .  | 123        |
| 5.3. Societal practices . . . . .   | 125        |
| 5.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .                                    | 125        |
| 5.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                       | 127        |
| 5.3.3. World connectiveness of tourist placesin Central and Northern Europe . . . . . | 128        |
| 5.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 130        |
| 5.5. Atlas . . . . .  | 130        |
| Chapter 6. The Mediterranean Basin . . . . .                                       | 135 |
| 6.1. One of the three most touristic areas in the World . . . . .                         | 135        |
| 6.1.1. The first tourist destination in the World . . . . .                               | 135        |
| 6.1.2. Specific context . . . . .   | 136        |
| 6.1.3. Consensual state hierarchy . . . . .   | 140        |
| 6.1.4. The case of France, the World's leading tourist destination . . . . .              | 142        |
| 6.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .   | 144        |
| 6.2.1. Discovery, a dominant practice. . . . .  | 144        |
| 6.2.2. Rest comes next. . . . .   | 147        |
| 6.2.3. Other practices . . . . .  | 149        |
| 6.2.4. Practices of non-Europeans in France: essentially discovery . . . . .              | 149        |
| 6.2.5. Typology of tourist places. . . . .  | 151        |
| 6.3. Societal practices . . . . .   | 153        |

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| 6.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies in Northern Europe . . . . .                                    | 153        |
| 6.3.2. Practices of former tourism societies in Southern Europeand the United States . . . . .           | 156        |
| 6.3.3. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .  | 156        |
| 6.3.4. France to non-resident tourists . . . . .   | 158        |
| 6.3.5. World connectiveness . . . . .  | 158        |
| 6.4. Conclusion . . . . .  | 160        |
| 6.5. Atlas . . . . .   | 161        |
| Chapter 7. Sub-Saharan Africa . . . . .   | 167 |
| 7.1. A continent still poorly integrated into the world tourism area . . . . .                               | 167        |
| 7.1.1. A continent on the fringes. . . . .   | 168        |
| 7.1.2. Strong opposition in favor of the States of theSoutheast of the continent. . . . .                | 168        |
| 7.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .  | 169        |
| 7.2.1. Popular places . . . . .  | 170        |
| 7.2.2. Places and practices, safaris on the continent . . . . .  | 170        |
| 7.2.3. Resting on the beaches. . . . .   | 171        |
| 7.2.4. Search for diversification . . . . .  | 175        |
| 7.2.5. Special case: the Republic of South Africa. . . . .   | 176        |
| 7.2.6. Typology of tourist places. . . . .   | 177        |
| 7.3. Societal practices . . . . .  | 181        |
| 7.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .   | 181        |
| 7.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .  | 184        |
| 7.3.3. World connectiveness of sub-Saharan African places . . . . .  | 184        |
| 7.4. Conclusion . . . . .  | 186        |
| 7.5. Atlas . . . . .   | 187        |
| Chapter 8. Western Asia . . . . .   | 195 |
| 8.1. A mosaic of tourist attractions. . . . .  | 196        |
| 8.1.1. Region marked by high tensions . . . . .  | 197        |
| 8.1.2. Maintaining a regular flow . . . . .  | 198        |
| 8.1.3. Arabian Peninsula, renewal of contrasts . . . . .   | 198        |
| 8.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .  | 200        |
| 8.2.1. Dubai and Abu Dhabi, all-purpose metropolises:Oman, a more sensible tourist destination . . . . . | 200        |
| 8.2.2. Discovery of India organized in two tourism areas . . . . .   | 201        |
| 8.2.3. Combinations bringing together dominantdiscovery with secondary rest and play practices . . . . . | 204        |
| 8.2.4. Typology of tourist places. . . . .   | 209        |
| 8.3. Societal practices . . . . .  | 211        |

---

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| 8.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .                              | 211        |
| 8.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                 | 211        |
| 8.3.3. World connectiveness . . . . .   | 212        |
| 8.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 213        |
| 8.5. Atlas . . . . .  | 214        |
| Chapter 9. Southeast Asia . . . . .  | 219 |
| 9.1. Two-step tourism implementation . . . . .                                      | 220        |
| 9.1.1. Cultural and landscape mosaic . . . . .                                      | 221        |
| 9.1.2. Tourism invigorated by China's entry onto the scene . . . . .                | 223        |
| 9.1.3. Thailand, a key destination . . . . .  | 226        |
| 9.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .   | 228        |
| 9.2.1. Regional tourist frames . . . . .  | 228        |
| 9.2.2. Rest and discovery in competition . . . . .                                  | 228        |
| 9.2.3. Typology of tourist places . . . . .   | 229        |
| 9.3. Societal practices . . . . .   | 231        |
| 9.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .                              | 231        |
| 9.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                 | 232        |
| 9.3.3. World connectiveness of Southeast Asia's tourist places . . . . .            | 233        |
| 9.4. Conclusion . . . . .   | 235        |
| 9.5. Atlas . . . . .  | 235        |
| Chapter 10. Northeast Asia . . . . .   | 239 |
| 10.1. Recent entry on the world tourist scene, a spectacular breakthrough . . . . . | 239        |
| 10.1.1. Access to progressive and State-controlled tourism . . . . .                | 240        |
| 10.1.2. Two advantages and one disadvantage . . . . .                               | 241        |
| 10.1.3. Tourist hierarchy of States . . . . .                                       | 242        |
| 10.2. Touristicity of places . . . . .  | 242        |
| 10.2.1. A region of discovery. . . . .  | 243        |
| 10.2.2. Cruises and few stays. . . . .  | 245        |
| 10.2.3. Typology of tourist places . . . . .  | 245        |
| 10.3. Societal practices . . . . .  | 248        |
| 10.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies. . . . .                              | 248        |
| 10.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                                | 251        |
| 10.3.3. World connectiveness . . . . .  | 254        |
| 10.4. Conclusion . . . . .  | 255        |
| 10.5. Atlas . . . . .   | 256        |
| Chapter 11. Oceania and the Pacific Islands . . . . .                        | 261 |
| 11.1. A fantasy region but one that is poorly visited . . . . .                     | 261        |
| 11.1.1. Disadvantages affecting globalized tourism . . . . .                        | 261        |
| 11.1.2. Hierarchy of States . . . . .   | 263        |

|   |     |
|---|-----|
| 11.2. Touristicity of the places . . . . .                                  | 264 |
| 11.2.1. Discovery in the two largest islands: Australia and New Zealand . . | 265 |
| 11.2.2. Rest in the smallest islands . . . . .                              | 268 |
| 11.2.3. Play . . . . .  | 270 |
| 11.2.4. Typology of places . . . . .  | 270 |
| 11.3. Societal practices . . . . .  | 272 |
| 11.3.1. Practices of former tourism societies . . . . .                     | 273 |
| 11.3.2. Practices of new tourism societies . . . . .                        | 273 |
| 11.3.3. World connectiveness of places in the Oceania–Pacific region . .    | 274 |
| 11.4. Conclusion . . . . .  | 276 |
| 11.5. Atlas . . . . .   | 276 |
| Conclusion . . . . .   | 281 |
| References . . . . .   | 289 |
| Index . . . . .  | 301 |