
Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Introduction	ix
Chapter 1. Industrial Policy and Competition	1
1.1. The State and industrial policy	7
1.1.1. The State organizing the economy	8
1.1.2. Challenging the economic role of the State	16
1.2. Competition policy as the area of public action	19
1.2.1. Control of the market architecture	21
1.2.2. Monitoring the functioning of markets	38
1.3. Conclusion	50
Chapter 2. Competition and Innovation Policy	53
2.1. The renewal of the framework of thought	54
2.1.1. A new competitive economics	55
2.1.2. The geography of innovation	60
2.1.3. Innovation and competition policy: the Lisbon strategy	65
2.2. Innovation policy as a “new industrial policy”	69
2.2.1. Innovation and territory: competitiveness clusters	70
2.2.2. A new institutional framework for innovation	76
2.2.3. Support for innovative SMEs	78
2.3. The ambiguities of the “new industrial policy”	81
2.3.1. The logic of agglomeration	82
2.3.2. The logic of development	84
2.3.3. A new mode of governance	85
2.4. The Programme d’investissement d’avenir (PIA)	87

2.4.1. The logic of the Juppé-Rocard report	88
2.4.2. The PIA architecture	91
2.4.3. The link between the PIA and the competitiveness clusters	93
2.5. Conclusion	95
Chapter 3. Reindustrialization Through Innovation	97
3.1. The affirmation of an industrial ambition	100
3.1.1. A new concern: industry.	101
3.1.2. The return of the sector concept	104
3.2. The nature of the industry	107
3.2.1. Problems in defining the industry	109
3.2.2. The question of industrial organization	115
3.3. Towards a renewal of State intervention.	122
3.3.1. The new virtues of industrial policy	123
3.3.2. Rediscovering the argument for infant industry	126
3.4. Conclusion	129
Conclusion	133
References	145
Index	161