

Contents

Preface	xiii
Yves CHARBIT
Presentation of Authors.	xv
Introduction. Interdisciplinary Perspectives.	xxi
Yves CHARBIT
Part 1. Historical and Demographic Context	1
Chapter 1. Definition and Implementation of Human Rights in France (18th–20th Centuries)	3
Ralph SCHOR
1.1. Introduction: the Ancien Regime	3
1.2. The legacy of the Enlightenment	5
1.3. The generous face of the interwar period: openness and human rights	9
1.4. The dark side of the interwar period: xenophobia and racism	15
1.5. Conclusion	19
1.6. References	20

Chapter 2. French Immigration Policy 1945–2025 23

Catherine WIHTOL DE WENDEN

2.1. Introduction.	23
2.2. 1945–1974: an immigration policy dominated by labor needs.	24
2.2.1. The failure of controlled immigration (1945–1955).	24
2.2.2. The rise of spontaneous immigration (1955–1966)	27
2.2.3. Attempts to regain control of migration (1966–1974)	28
2.3. 1974–2007: a logic of closure, coupled with the issue of integration.	33
2.3.1. The beginnings of an integration policy (1974–1981)	33
2.3.2. Legislative activism (1981–1995)	39
2.3.3. In search of an immigration policy (1995–2007)	46
2.4. The irresistible rise of the politicization of the migration issue, under the control of public opinion.	48
2.4.1. The period 2007–2017	48
2.4.2. From 2017 to 2025: the display of a policy of control	50
2.5. References	50

Chapter 3. Xenophobic Populism and the Instrumentalization of African Demography 53

Yves CHARBIT

3.1. Demography and immigration: the facts.	54
3.1.1. Three arguments put forward by opponents of immigration.	54
3.1.2. Objective data	57
3.2. Three pseudo theories on immigration.	61
3.2.1. The tolerance threshold	61
3.2.2. The “scramble for Europe”	63
3.2.3. The “Great Replacement”	66
3.3. The historical roots of current xenophobia (1830–1974)	70
3.3.1. A heavy legacy	70
3.3.2. The period 1945–2020	72
3.3.3. Two public institutions, INED and INSEE	72
3.4. The right and immigration	74
3.4.1. Four leaders	74
3.4.2. The role of networks and the media	75
3.5. Conclusion	76
3.6. References	78

Chapter 4. Migration Flows and Political Realism in Spain (1991–2025) 81

Juan David SEMPERE SOUVANNAVONG

4.1. From a country of emigration to a country of immigration: the background to foreign immigration in Spain.	82
4.1.1. Historical and regulatory background	82
4.1.2. The turning point of the 1990s (1991–1998)	83
4.2. The 2000s: migratory expansion and the construction of an immigration policy	86
4.2.1. 1999–2001: a period of upheaval during which migration policy was brought up-to-date	86
4.2.2. 2001–2008: an unprecedented acceleration and a radical transformation of the migration landscape	89
4.2.3. 2002–2010: the beginnings of a more coherent migration policy.	91
4.3. Crises and the reconfiguration of the migration system	93
4.3.1. The impacts of the economic crisis on migration (2008–2015).	93
4.3.2. The “migration crises” (2015–2020).	95
4.3.3. The impact of the pandemic on migration (2020–2022)	97
4.3.4. Reception of Ukrainian refugees (2022–2025).	98
4.4. Conclusion	98
4.5. References	99

Chapter 5. Italian Migration: Putting an End to its Segmented Representation 101

Adelina MIRANDA

5.1. Introduction.	101
5.2. International, colonial and internal emigration	103
5.3. The resurgence of emigration after the 2000s.	107
5.4. Between old and new migrants in France	109
5.5. The political and identity dimensions of immigration	111
5.6. The presence of women	115
5.7. Migration, “internal racism” and “external racism”	117
5.8. Conclusion	121
5.9. References	122

Chapter 6. Migration and Migration Policies in the Soviet Union and the Russian Federation since 1945 129

Lewis H. SIEGELBAUM

6.1. Post-war migration and post-colonial migration	130
6.1.1. Demobilization of soldiers.	130
6.1.2. Repatriation and filtration of prisoners of war and civilian laborers	131
6.1.3. Return of evacuees	133
6.1.4. Polish–Soviet population exchange	133
6.1.5. “Colonial” settlement.	134
6.2. Labor migration, 1950s–1980s	136
6.2.1. Peasant out-migration	136
6.2.2. Recruitment of temporary migrants above mandated limits (limitchiki)	137
6.2.3. Seasonal migration	138
6.2.4. Recruitment of foreign workers.	140
6.3. Asylum and refugee migration	141
6.3.1. Restitution of deported nations	141
6.3.2. Emigration of diasporic peoples	142
6.3.3. Out-migration from the Far North	143
6.3.4. National homogenization and immigration	144
6.3.5. Temporary labor migration from the “near abroad”.	145
6.4. Conclusion	146
6.5. References	147

Part 2. The Political and Ideological Dimension 153

Chapter 7. Human Rights and International Displacement: Causes, Frameworks and Challenges 155

James F. HOLLIFIELD and Tessa PETERSON

7.1. Introduction.	155
7.2. Historical context	157
7.3. Forced migration and displacement of people	157
7.4. The liberal paradox and the dilemmas of migration governance.	159
7.5. “People are not shirts”	163
7.6. Human rights instruments	165
7.6.1. Universal declaration of human rights.	165

7.6.2. 1951 United Nations convention relating to the status of refugees and 1967 protocol	166
7.6.3. Non-refoulement	167
7.6.4. International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights	168
7.6.5. Regional human rights treaties: 1969 African Union Conventions on Refugees and Internally Displaced Persons	168
7.6.6. Non-binding law: guiding principles on internal displacement.	169
7.7. Moving forward	170
7.8. Conclusion	171
7.9. References	172

Chapter 8. The Tension Between Human Rights and International Migration 175

Serge RABIER

8.1. Introduction.	175
8.2. Colonial and post-colonial migration to the present day: the unthought aspect of legal universalism	176
8.2.1. The weight of colonial history	176
8.2.2. From the Code Noir to Haiti's debt	177
8.2.3. The "second" colonization.	178
8.2.4. Moving beyond the ambiguity of European universalism	179
8.3. Human rights challenged by migrant otherness or the political construction of a threat.	184
8.3.1. The multiple faces of migrants	184
8.3.2. The cognitive dissonance of a "political debt" born of history.	186
8.4. Migrants' rights as a reflection of current issues in international economic and geopolitical relations	187
8.4.1. A look back at the complexity of migration and migration policies.	187
8.4.2. Migrants' rights as a critical tool for migration policy?	188
8.4.3. Global frameworks for migration management	189
8.5. Contemporary migration and human rights between demographic realities, ideology and political choices: the case of Europe	190
8.5.1. Objective analysis of data on migration to Europe: the case of sub-Saharan migrants	190
8.5.2. In Europe, a public debate that focuses on only 10% of migration	191

8.5.3. Logics of closure and control that limit migrants' rights	192
8.5.4. Thinking about migration in line with sustainable development and human rights	193
8.5.5. Thinking about migration in the best interests of Europe.	193
8.6. Conclusion	194
8.7. References	195

Chapter 9. Struggle and Solidarity: Nativism, Immigration and the Defense of Human Rights in the United States in the 21st Century

197

Neil FOLEY

9.1. Introduction.	197
9.2. The modern immigrant detention system	199
9.3. Family separation	201
9.4. Refugees and asylum seekers	204
9.5. Forced return and violation of the principle of non-refoulement	205
9.6. The sanctuary movement.	207
9.7. DREAMERS	212
9.8. Coalitions for immigrant rights and environmental justice	214
9.9. Conclusion	218
9.10. References.	218

Chapter 10. Indian Laws on Refugees and Hospitality Policy Since Independence

229

Hemaadri Singh RANA

10.1. Introduction	229
10.2. Epistemological basis of international refugee law.	230
10.3. India's ambivalence toward refugee law	235
10.3.1. Definition of a refugee	236
10.3.2. Exclusion	238
10.3.3. Cessation, revocation or cancellation	239
10.3.4. Rights and duties of refugees	239
10.3.5. Composition of the authority	240
10.4. Hospitality policy in India	241
10.5. Conclusion	243
10.6. References.	244

Chapter 11. Updating the National Register of Citizens in Assam, India: The Birth of an Anti-Immigrant Discourse 249

Samir Kumar DAS

11.1. Introduction	249
11.2. Elusive readability	250
11.3. Liminal refugees	255
11.4. The nation's game	257
11.5. Translation	260
11.6. Differences and continuities	263
11.7. Educational self-criticism.	265
11.8. References.	267

Chapter 12. Towards a Moroccan Immigration and Asylum Policy Respectful of Human Rights. 271

Nadia KHROUZ and Mohamed AMARTI

12.1. Introduction	271
12.2. The progressive construction of a migration policy	272
12.2.1. The beginnings of immigration law in Morocco	272
12.2.2. Legislation adopted after independence	273
12.2.3. The turn of the 2000s	275
12.3. Reforms since the adoption of the 2011 Constitution	277
12.3.1. The new immigration and asylum policy (NPIA)	278
12.3.2. Improvement of certain foreigners' rights.	279
12.4. Critical analysis of legal and institutional mechanisms relating to migrants' rights in Morocco	284
12.4.1. Foreigners and migrants in Morocco: distinct narratives and mechanisms.	284
12.4.2. Toward a comprehensive, coherent immigration and asylum policy that respects human rights.	289
12.5. Conclusion	291
12.6. References.	292

Chapter 13. System for the Protection of Sub-Saharan Children in Tunisia 297

Riadh BEN KHALIFA

13.1. Introduction	297
13.2. Research questions and methodology.	299

13.3. The legal framework for the protection of EJM.	301
13.3.1. Protection of children in danger.	303
13.3.2. Child victims: applicability of the principle and failure to take into account the specific characteristics of immigrant children	304
13.3.3. Combating human trafficking and racial discrimination	305
13.4. Actors in protection and access to rights	306
13.4.1. Access to education	306
13.4.2. Access to healthcare	309
13.5. The fight against discrimination and human trafficking	311
13.6. Interorganizational collaboration	313
13.7. Conclusion	316
13.8. Appendix	317
13.9. References.	318
 Chapter 14. Scientifically Criminalizing Immigrants (Argentina 1890–1914).	321
Eugenia SCARZANELLA
14.1. Introduction	321
14.2. Lombrosian criminal anthropology in Argentina	322
14.3. Criminal groups	324
14.3.1. Lunfardos	325
14.3.2. Prostitutes.	325
14.4. Measuring crime rates among foreigners.	327
14.5. Immigrant crime: a political issue.	334
14.6. Conclusion	336
14.7. References.	337
 List of Authors	341
 Index	343