Contents

Introduction xi

Émilie VAYRE

Part 1. Uses of Technology for Business Purposes: Background and Consequences 1

Chapter 1. "Spillover" Work via Technology: Organizational Antecedents and Health Impacts 3

Catherine HELLEMANS and Émilie VAYRE

1.1. What is spillover work? 3
1.1.1. Objective parameters of spillover: location, duration, frequency and intensity of spillover 4
1.1.2. Subjective spillover and the meaning of spillover: boundary theory and preferences. 7
1.1.3. Spillover control: myself and others 9
1.2. Organizational background of spillover work via technologies 10
1.3. The health implications of spillover work via technologies 14
1.3.1. From hyperconnection to connection addiction 14
1.3.2. Spillover, the need for recovery and burnout. 16
1.4. Avenues of reflection and practical perspectives 19
1.5. References 21

Chapter 2. Nomadic, Informal and Mediated Work and Quality of Life 25

Maëlle PÉRISSÉ, Anne-Marie VONTHRON and Émilie VAYRE

2.1. Introduction 25
2.2. Relocated and mediated work: definition and implications for the quality of work life 26
2.2.1. Nomadic, informal and mediated work practices 26
2.2.2. Nomadic, informal and mediated work and quality of life at work . 27
2.3. Empirical case study 29
2.3.1. Method of investigation used 30
2.3.2. Study results 33
2.4. Contributions of the field study and practical perspectives 41
2.5. References 43

Chapter 3. Leadership and the Use of Technology: Health Implications 49

Valentina DOLCE, Chiara GHISLIERI, Monica MOLINO and Émilie VAYRE

3.1. Introduction 49
3.2. Organizational culture and leadership 50
3.2.1. Classical models of organizational culture 51
3.2.2. Presence and always-on cultures 52
3.3. Leadership: an ever-present theme 54
3.3.1. Traits, behaviors and leadership situations 54
3.3.2. Transformational and authentic leadership 56
3.3.3. The dark side of leadership 58
3.3.4. Leadership and its consequences 59
3.4. Leadership in the Industry 4.0 era 62
3.5. Conclusion 65
3.6. References 66

Part 2. Telework: Organizational, Collective and Individual Issues 73

Chapter 4. Telework: What is at Stake for Health, Quality of Life at Work and Management Methods? 75

Émilie VAYRE, Julie DEVIF, Thibault GACHET-MAUROZ and Christine MORIN-MESSABEL

4.1. Introduction 75
4.2. Telework: a challenge for social cohesion and health at work 76
4.2.1. Telework, risks of discrimination and health degradation 77

4.2.2. Preventing the risks of discrimination, unequal treatment and damage to health . . . 79
4.3. Telework space–time: work–life balance and gender equality . . . 81
4.3.1. Telework and the relationship between work and non-work life . . 82
4.3.2. Telework and gender (in)equality . . . 84
4.3.3. Preserving life balance and gender equality in the workplace . . . 87
4.4. Telework: a challenge for management policy and culture . . . 89
4.4.1. Telework, managerial dynamics and remote team management . . 89
4.4.2. Transforming organizational culture and managerial practices . . . 91
4.5. Conclusion . . . 93
4.6. References . . . 94

Chapter 5. Telework in Lockdown: The Employee Perspective . . . 103

Anne-Sophie MAILLOT, Thierry MEYER, Sophie PRUNIER-POULMAIRE and Émilie VAYRE

5.1. Introduction . . . 103
5.2. The existing literature on imposed teleworking during a pandemic situation . . . 104
5.2.1. The main determinants of the experience of confined telework in a pandemic situation . . . 104
5.2.2. Varied and complex effects . . . 106
5.3. Collection method and procedure . . . 109
5.4. The subjective experience of confined telework . . . 111
5.4.1. Reorganizing activity to face an unprecedented situation . . . 111
5.4.2. The evolution of communication methods and professional relations . . . 117
5.4.3. What is the impact on perceived mental and physical health? . . . 119
5.5. Lessons from confined telework from the employees' perspective . . . 122
5.6. Conclusion: limitations and perspectives . . . 124
5.7. References . . . 126

Chapter 6. (Re)creating the Inhabited Workspace: Rematerialization Practices of Remote Work . . . 129

Claire ESTAGNASIÉ, Claudine BONNEAU, Consuelo VASQUEZ and Émilie VAYRE

6.1. Introduction . . . 129
6.2. "Going to work": from work as a place to work from anywhere . . . 130
6.3. Space, materiality and remote work . . . 131
6.4. Understanding the (re)creation of workspaces . . . 133
6.5. Analyzing the types of inhabited workspaces . . . 136
6.5.1. Living in different physical spaces . . . 137
6.5.2. Living in virtual spaces . . . 143

6.5.3. Living in time as space. 144
6.6. Practices of (re)creating inhabited workspaces 146
6.6.1. “Drawing the plan”: the worker-architect and workplace emulation 146
6.6.2. “Laying the bricks”: the worker-bricklayer and boundary-building 148
6.6.3. “Choosing the wallpaper”: the worker-decorator and identification with the space 149
6.7. Inhabiting the different workspaces: a “meta-work” for which the individual is solely responsible? 150
6.8. References 151

Part 3. The Flex Office and Coworking: Conditions of Appropriation and Psychosocial Impacts 155

Chapter 7. The Flex Office: What are the Challenges for Organizations and Users? 157

Nicolas COCHARD and Delphine MINCHELLA

7.1. Introduction. 157
7.2. The origins of the flex office concept 157
7.2.1. Towards greater flexibility 157
7.2.2. The contribution of new information technologies 158
7.3. On the organizational side 159
7.3.1. Towards new paradigms. 159
7.3.2. The flex office and economic logic 160
7.3.3. Evaluating the effects of the flex office. 161
7.4. On the user side 162
7.4.1. Questioning the flex office experience 162
7.4.2. The perceived impact of the flex office. 163
7.5. The challenge of transforming the organization 167
7.6. Research and implementation of the post-Covid-19 flex office 169
7.7. References 170

Chapter 8. Working in a Coworking Space: What are the Psychosocial Issues? 175

Julie DEVIF, Christine MORIN-MESSABEL, Lydia MARTIN and Émilie VAYRE

8.1. Introduction. 175
8.2. Coworking spaces: definition, characteristics and user profiles 176
8.2.1. The initial objectives of coworking 176
8.2.2. Characteristics of coworking: from the common to the specific . . 178
8.2.3. User profiles and motivations. 180

8.3. The impact of coworking 183
8.3.1. Coworking, performance and productivity 183
8.3.2. Coworking and professional socialization 184
8.3.3. Coworking and the work/“non-work” link 187
8.4. Conclusion: prospects for future field studies 188
8.5. References 190

List of Authors 195

Index 197