
Contents

Foreword	vii
Introduction	xi
Chapter 1. Responsibility in Business and Enterprise	1
1.1. Different notions of responsibility	2
1.2. Legal responsibility	4
1.2.1. Civil liability of companies and directors.	4
1.2.2. Criminal liability of physical and moral persons	5
1.3. Structure and responsibility	9
1.4. Corporate social responsibility	10
1.4.1. Different definitions of CSR	10
1.4.2. Different levels of “social” responsibility	12
1.4.3. Tools for CSR	28
1.5. Conclusion	35
Chapter 2. Justifications for Corporate Responsibility	37
2.1. Social and legal responsibility.	38
2.1.1. Shareholder rights and interests	38
2.1.2. The company as a locus of responsibility.	42
2.2. Economic efficiency, financial performance and CSR	47
2.2.1. Ethical principles and informational asymmetry	48
2.2.2. Promoting profitable ethics	51
2.2.3. Stakeholder interests and transaction costs	53
2.2.4. The search for empirical correlation.	58
2.3. Explicitly normative justifications for responsibility	60
2.4. Conclusion	64

Chapter 3. Innovation and Responsibility	67
3.1. Defining innovation	70
3.2. Corporate social responsibility and the promotion of innovation	75
3.2.1. Innovation and classic forms of responsibility	75
3.2.2. CSR and innovation: scope and limitations	77
3.3. The need for moral innovation	84
3.3.1. Epistemological and moral innovation	84
3.3.2. The financial crisis and the responsibility of theorists	84
3.4. Responsible innovation	87
3.4.1. Understandings of responsible innovation	87
3.4.2. The conflict between innovation and responsibility.	92
3.5. Practices of responsible innovation	103
3.5.1. Co-construction, participation and responsible innovation.	103
3.5.2. “Social” innovation.	108
3.6. Conclusion	111
Chapter 4. Responsibility as Virtue in Innovation	113
4.1. Responsibility as virtue or care	114
4.1.1. Broadening perspectives.	115
4.1.2. Networks of interrelations as the basis for responsibility	120
4.2. Responsibility and virtue in CSR	124
4.2.1. “Moral capitalism”	125
4.2.2. Determiners of moral reasoning	130
4.3. Conclusion	134
Conclusion	137
Bibliography	141
Index	157