

---

Contents

---

Introduction	ix
Marianne CHOUTEAU, Joëlle FOREST and Céline NGUYEN
Chapter 1. A Brief History of European Technical Culture and Its Relationship with Innovation	1
Anne-Françoise GARÇON
1.1. Introduction	1
1.2. Technological development practices in the 16th Century	2
1.3. A new system of technology, but no innovation culture	3
1.4. But how did entrepreneurs achieve success before Schumpeter?	5
1.5. A “dashboard knowledge” culture to complement the operating cultures.	7
1.6. When the “dashboard knowledge” culture becomes an innovation culture	10
1.7. Conclusion: what does the objectification of an innovation culture at the turn of the 19th–20th Century mean?	13
1.8. References	17
Chapter 2. When Innovation Culture Hides Technical Culture	21
Marianne CHOUTEAU, Joëlle FOREST and Céline NGUYEN
2.1. Introduction	21
2.2. Culture and technical culture	23
2.2.1. Culture or cultures?	23
2.2.2. Approaches to technical culture	25
2.3. Technical culture as we understand it	27
2.4. Why is technical culture still struggling to develop?	30

2.5. An innovation culture that acts as a barrier . . . . .	32
2.6. Conclusion . . . . .	36
2.7. References . . . . .	37

Chapter 3. Technical Culture and the Contemporary World . . . . . 41

Bruno JACOMY

3.1. Introduction . . . . .	41
3.2. Technology and innovation in the digital age . . . . .	42
3.2.1. Innovation and control over the future . . . . .	43
3.2.2. Technology, innovation and culture . . . . .	44
3.3. An approach to innovation in progress . . . . .	45
3.3.1. A variable focal analysis . . . . .	45
3.3.2. Objects in their surroundings . . . . .	48
3.4. Innovation and evolution of technical objects . . . . .	50
3.4.1. An innovative approach, with small steps and big jumps . . . . .	51
3.4.2. Families of objects to understand evolution . . . . .	52
3.4.3. The laws of evolution . . . . .	54
3.4.4. Innovation in human history . . . . .	55
3.5. Conclusion . . . . .	56
3.6. References . . . . .	57

Chapter 4. Industrialist and Inventor: Alfred Nobel's Dynamite Invention . . . . . 61

Sophie BOUTILLIER

4.1. Introduction . . . . .	61
4.2. Alfred Nobel: the chaotic journey of an obstinate entrepreneur, somewhere between chance and necessity? . . . . .	63
4.2.1. The invention of dynamite by Nobel or the archetype of serendipity? . . . . .	63
4.2.2. Alfred Nobel between the company and the laboratory . . . . .	65
4.3. The invention of dynamite: a well-anticipated chance . . . . .	70
4.3.1. A favorable economic and institutional context . . . . .	70
4.3.2. The invention of dynamite: chance and necessity . . . . .	73
4.4. Conclusion . . . . .	76
4.5. References . . . . .	77

Chapter 5. Thinking Creatively to Innovate: A Study of the Genesis of a Mathematical Breakthrough by Cédric Villani . . . . . 81

Joëlle FOREST, Marie-Line GARDÉS and Danièle VIAL

5.1. Introduction . . . . .	81
-----------------------------	----

5.2. Emergence of innovations according to Cédric Villani . . . . .	84
5.2.1. A conception of innovation, inherited from the conception of Henri Poincaré's mathematical invention . . . . .	84
5.2.2. The seven ingredients of "innovation ideas" according to Cédric Villani . . . . .	87
5.3. The strength of networks . . . . .	91
5.3.1. A network of actors with varied knowledge . . . . .	91
5.3.2. Contribution of the network of actors to the genesis of the theorem . . . . .	93
5.4. Creative rationality: the forgotten ingredient . . . . .	95
5.4.1. Creative rationality: what are we talking about? . . . . .	95
5.4.2. Cédric Villani and creative rationality. . . . .	96
5.5. Conclusion . . . . .	97
5.6. References . . . . .	98
Chapter 6. Innovation Culture in Organizations . . . . .	101
Muriel DAVIES and Stéphanie BUISINE
6.1. Introduction: recent developments in the concept of innovation . . . . .	101
6.2. Innovation culture in organizations. . . . .	103
6.2.1. Innovative leaders and managers. . . . .	103
6.2.2. Presence of innovative teams . . . . .	104
6.2.3. Presence of innovative individuals. . . . .	105
6.2.4. Organizational context . . . . .	105
6.2.5. Links to the environment outside the organization . . . . .	108
6.2.6. The ETOILE model of innovation culture . . . . .	109
6.3. Discussion . . . . .	110
6.4. References . . . . .	112
Chapter 7. Technical Culture and Innovation Culture: Reconciling through Design . . . . .	117
John DIDIER
7.1. Introduction . . . . .	117
7.2. Technical culture . . . . .	118
7.3. The culture contained in the technical object . . . . .	119
7.4. Innovation culture . . . . .	120
7.4.1. Training designers to generate technical and social innovation. . . . .	123
7.4.2. Innovation in technical education . . . . .	125
7.5. The training and transmission of a technical culture. . . . .	126
7.5.1. Innovation in the learner's role . . . . .	127

7.5.2. From the technical object to the pedagogy of the project . . . . .	128
7.5.3. The individual creator and designer of their project . . . . .	129
7.6. Technical culture and knowledge creation. . . . .	130
7.7. Conclusion . . . . .	135
7.8. References . . . . .	135
Chapter 8. Cultural Anthropology, Animism, and Industrial Innovation Processes: The Case of the “Animal Language” Myth . . . . .	139
Fanny PARISE
8.1. Introduction . . . . .	139
8.2. A collective unconscious faced with a diversity of material objects and cultures . . . . .	140
8.3. An immersive approach, a vehicle for decentering. . . . .	142
8.4. The experience of the cabinet of curiosities where the experience of writing is renewed . . . . .	144
8.4.1. The technology behind a new form of animism . . . . .	144
8.4.2. From a “show company” to the staging of innovation . . . . .	145
8.4.3. Orality and writing as creative drivers . . . . .	146
8.5. Mini-mythologies of modernity that fit into current societal issues. . . . .	148
8.6. When technique meets mythology towards a first approach of materialization of modernity stories . . . . .	151
8.7. From an anthropological perspective to a corporate innovation culture . . . . .	153
8.8. References . . . . .	154
Conclusion . . . . .	161
Marianne CHOUTEAU, Joëlle FOREST and Céline NGUYEN
List of Authors . . . . .	165
Index . . . . .	167