
Contents

Preface	ix
Part 1. The Situation in France	1
Introduction to Part 1	3
Chapter 1. Exploring the Earth’s Hidden Face	5
1.1. What is ecology?	5
1.2. Ecology, a new science?	9
1.3. What can we learn from ecology and the natural sciences?	12
1.3.1. The planet	12
1.3.2. France.	14
1.3.3. The United Kingdom.	18
1.3.4. What must be done? Three positions: green growth, degrowth and other development	20
1.4. What should be taken seriously? Risk, relativism and constructivism	23
1.4.1. Social sciences and natural sciences: the “Great Divide”?	24
1.4.2. Expertise and public decisions	29
Chapter 2. Who Are the Ecologists?	33
2.1. “Whistleblower” scientists	33
2.2. From environmentalism to ecologism	36
2.2.1. Naturalist associations	37
2.2.2. A “movement” with unclear outlines	40
2.2.3. “Ecologists” and “environmentalists”	44

2.3. Ecology in politics, in France and around the world	49
2.3.1. Ecologism in the French political arena.	49
2.3.2. Early alter-globalization and international ecopolitics	54
Part 2. An Active Minority against the Majorities	59
Introduction to Part 2.	61
Chapter 3. Liberal Skepticism.	67
3.1. Liberalism or emancipation from the Ancien Régime.	70
3.2. The rights of nature over humanism?.	77
3.2.1. Animal rights	78
3.2.2. The rights of nature.	80
3.2.3. The legal dimension	83
3.2.4. The “preference for nature” over human rights?.	85
3.2.5. The rights of nature: a new universalism?	88
3.3. A refusal of the liberal rules of politics?	89
3.3.1. A rejection of the Rule of law? Catastrophism and “direct action”	90
3.3.2. “Natural order” against “unnatural humans”?	94
3.4. The “liberal-libertarianism” of French ecologism	105
3.4.1. Neither the State, nor the market: libertarian inspiration.	106
3.4.2. Neither right nor left: The centrist position.	107
3.4.3. Faced with “Khmers verts”, the solution of technology and green capitalism.	109
3.4.4. Ecological economics or the return of virtue.	113
3.5. The ecologist concern about an eco-fascism	115
Chapter 4. Toward Eco-socialism?	117
4.1. What is socialism?	121
4.1.1. When the science of wealth produces pauperism	121
4.1.2. Marxism or the moral unit of socialism.	125
4.1.3. Four socialist currents	133
4.2. A difficult eco-socialism	141
4.2.1. The theory of the “secondary front”	142
4.2.2. What does “socializing” mean in the age of the Anthropocene?.	152
4.3. “It is easier to imagine the end of the world than the end of capitalism”	168

Chapter 5. From Centrism to Eco-fascism	171
5.1. What is conservatism?	175
5.1.1. Contemporary Orléanism	177
5.1.2. Illiberal conservatisms: from Bonald to the “extreme” right-wing	183
5.2. Is ecologism conservative?	198
5.2.1. A real, but very minor, conservative current	200
5.2.2. The war of partial connections and partial conclusions.	214
5.2.3. “The ecology of the right”: Liberal, groupuscular or ecofascist	238
5.3. Composing with the real: The question of alliances	241
Conclusion	243
Bibliography	249
Index	291