
Contents

Introduction	vii
Chapter 1. The New Transition	1
1.1. The world of yesterday	3
1.2. Toward an economy of supply	6
1.3. Withdrawal of the State	9
1.4. Idealized globalization	11
1.5. Between dream and reality	14
1.6. Viability in question	17
Chapter 2. The Constraints of Innovation	19
2.1. A truly industrial world	19
2.2. Roundabout production	22
2.3. A creative destruction process	25
2.4. Coordination requirement	27
2.5. Coordination power	30
2.6. The shortcomings of globalization	33
Chapter 3. Entrepreneurs at the Crossroads	37
3.1. The entrepreneur out of time	38
3.2. The entrepreneur, master of time	41
3.3. Market connections	44
3.4. Competition revisited	48
3.5. Between value creation and diversion	50
3.6. Globalized entrepreneurship	53

Chapter 4. The Time of Finance	57
4.1. Idealized financial markets	59
4.2. A contrasted reality	62
4.3. Capital and commitment	65
4.4. Corporate value	68
4.5. Influence of the funding structure	70
4.6. The risk of financial decommitment	72
Chapter 5. The Return of Inequalities and Rents	79
5.1. The false argument of technology	80
5.2. A weakened growth potential	83
5.3. The perverse effect of household debt	85
5.4. Toward a rent-seekers economy	87
5.5. Social order in question	89
5.6. The new segmentation	91
Chapter 6. The State in View of the Globalization Challenge	95
6.1. Free trade in question	96
6.2. The illusory promise of structural reforms	100
6.3. The obsession with competitiveness	104
6.4. The dilemma of borders	107
6.5. The temporal coherence of public action	110
6.6. The institutional challenge	114
Chapter 7. Liberalism Revisited	119
7.1. Trust and regulation	120
7.2. Classical and bastardized liberalism	122
7.3. The State and the common good	128
7.4. Liberal democracy	131
7.5. The challenge of globalization	134
7.6. An open and equitable society	137
Conclusion	141
References	147
Index	155