

---

Contents

---

Introduction . . . . .	ix
Part 1. Re-presentations and Artifices . . . . .	1
Introduction to Part 1 . . . . .	3
Chapter 1. Re-presentation as a Form of Artistic and Cultural Legitimization . . . . .	5
1.1. The work of art and its reproducibility at the service of the fashion industry . . . . .	7
1.1.1. Culturization of the purse, and portability of the work of art . . . . .	9
1.1.2. The purse as an apparatus for commercial and artistic mediation . . . . .	12
1.2. Book publishing at the service of the fashion brand's cultural value . . . . .	15
1.2.1. A book as beautiful as a trunk (Louis Vuitton) . . . . .	16
1.2.2. Literary praise for luxury goods . . . . .	19
1.3. The popularity of fashion accessories . . . . .	20
1.3.1. The value of a luxury item through the club model . . . . .	22
1.4. The exhibited advertising poster . . . . .	24
1.4.1. Self-referential legitimations . . . . .	25
1.4.2. Bricolage and illusion: advertising the advertising . . . . .	27
1.5. The advertising poster as a testimonial discourse . . . . .	29
1.5.1. The caption as a thematic and generic engagement . . . . .	30
1.5.2. The presentation of the ready-to-wear collection as an event . . . . .	32

Chapter 2. Investing Symbolically in the Museum, Transforming the Store: Re-presentation as an Iterative Event . . . . .	35
2.1. From the boutique to heritage enhancement sites . . . . .	36
2.1.1. The place where the brand's heritage is developed: the advertiser's dual entity . . . . .	37
2.1.2. Patrimonialization and unadvertisization: from forms to formats . . . . .	40
2.2. The museum exhibition: a communicational pretext . . . . .	42
2.2.1. Staging a symbolic distribution: from the discontinuous to the continuous . . . . .	43
2.2.2. The image of a work of art: symbolic distribution and artification . . . . .	46
2.3. Distribution of marketable goods and contemporary art: the full and the void . . . . .	47
2.3.1. Cultural missions and department stores . . . . .	48
2.3.2. From cultural mediations to market mediations (and vice versa) . . . . .	49
2.3.3. In praise of the void and the worship of merchandise . . . . .	53
Part 2. Re-presentations and Forms of Life: The Religious and the Political . . . . .	57
Introduction to Part 2 . . . . .	59
Chapter 3. Re-presentation as a Cult Form . . . . .	61
3.1. Biblical stories and media advertising: fashion and (divine) grace . . . . .	64
3.1.1. Farmers, a storm and a boat: the biblical story of Noah's Ark . . . . .	66
3.1.2. The Gucci actant: from ready-to-wear to ready-to-save . . . . .	69
3.2. Biblical stories and media advertising: fashion and adoration . . . . .	71
3.2.1. Advertising idolatry . . . . .	73
3.2.2. From product name to brand signature . . . . .	74
3.2.3. Actualization and ostentation of Dior's semiotic and religious capital . . . . .	76
3.3. From places dedicated to Christian worship to places dedicated to fashion worship . . . . .	78
3.3.1. From the Hospice des Incurables to the Balenciaga showroom . . . . .	78

---

3.3.2. Profanation of the sacred, sacralization of the lay public. . . . .	82
3.3.3. Apparatus – Relic. . . . .	84
3.3.4. Materiality, cult value and transparency . . . . .	86
Chapter 4. Re-presentation as a Rewriting of Politics . . . . .	89
4.1. The pretension of politics and its market value. . . . .	93
4.1.1. Demonstration: presence, representation, event and spectacle. . . . .	94
4.1.2. Re-presenting and misappropriating the demonstration . . . . .	96
4.1.3. From stereotype to irony: political pretension . . . . .	99
4.2. From text to (pre-)text: (political) mediations in the fashion industry. . . . .	100
4.2.1. Rewriting the media image: reintroducing the formula (to better deconstruct it). . . . .	101
4.2.2. Imitation and counterfeiting of the event formula. . . . .	104
4.3. Removal of the pre-text, and celebration of the pretext . . . . .	108
4.3.1. Esthetization and commodification of the protest . . . . .	108
4.3.2. Discrepancies between the medium and message . . . . .	110
Part 3. The Power of the Fashion Industry’s Re-presentational Apparatus. . . . .	115
Introduction to Part 3 . . . . .	117
Chapter 5. The Industrialization of Creativity . . . . .	119
5.1. From the aristocratic model to the market model: the industrialization of luxury fashion. . . . .	121
5.1.1. From the Court model to the designer model . . . . .	121
5.1.2. From the market model to commercial luxury: pragmatic and symbolic democratization. . . . .	123
5.2. Managerial creativity as a panoply . . . . .	126
5.2.1. Forms and powers of managerial creativity in the fashion industry. . . . .	127
5.2.2. Standardization: the industrialization of managerial creativity. . . . .	130
5.2.3. Semiotic management of managerial creativity in the face of the market model . . . . .	134
5.3. Physical space, media space and symbolic space. . . . .	136
5.3.1. Material value and the immaterial value of fashion. . . . .	138
5.3.2. Offshore manufacturing and production: a partial “made in France” approach. . . . .	140

5.3.3. Modes and cycles: an environmental problem . . . . .	143
5.3.4. From the back to the front region: the fashion industry, the stage and backstage . . . . .	147
Chapter 6. Reinvesting, Diverting, Reformulating and Entertaining: The Leisure-form of the Fashion Industry . . . . .	153
6.1. Reinvestments and reintroductions: from appropriation to subversion . . . . .	155
6.1.1 Investing, reinvesting, re-presenting, appropriating: legitimacy and re-qualification . . . . .	156
6.1.2. Reinvesting and subverting: the cultural hegemony of fashion . . . . .	159
6.2. Diversions . . . . .	162
6.2.1. Diverting politics . . . . .	163
6.2.2. Diverting the diversion . . . . .	165
6.3. Political power of the fashion industry's re-presentation apparatus . . . . .	167
6.3.1. The media industry in question: a phantasmagoria . . . . .	168
6.3.2. The leisure-form . . . . .	171
Conclusion . . . . .	175
References . . . . .	181
Index . . . . .	193