
Contents

Preface	xi
Jean-Philippe ACCART
Author Presentation	xv
Introduction	xix
Françoise GEOFFROY-BERNARD
Part 1. The User at the Heart of Library Marketing Strategies.	1
Chapter 1. Communication at the Heart of the Evolution of Library Satisfaction Surveys	3
Nelly SCIARDIS
1.1. What surveys should be carried out?	3
1.1.1. Contributions and limitations of induced data	4
1.1.2. The interest of solicited data: the proven example of LibQUAL+.	5
1.1.3. Testing other competing tools	6
1.2. Services Publics+ in France: the new priority given to surveys and communication	8
1.3. The evolution of ISO standards on library activity: the need for inclusive libraries for users who are actively involved in change	10
1.4. Conclusion: towards a new paradigm for rethinking public surveys	11
1.5. References	12

Chapter 2. UX Design in the Library	13
Nicolas BEUDON
2.1. UX design.	13
2.1.1. Related disciplines: applied ethnography, marketing	14
2.2. UX as a philosophy and as a process	15
2.2.1. The research phase	15
2.2.2. The ideation phase	16
2.2.3. The prototyping phase	17
2.2.4. The scaling up phase	18
2.2.5. UX design, design thinking, codesign, etc.: changing names.	19
2.3. The arrival of design methods in libraries	20
2.4. References	22
Chapter 3. Unlocking the Library Brand Potential	25
Cathelijne KUITERS
3.1. A unified communication approach to bridge the awareness gap.	26
3.2. Growing the library brand	27
3.2.1. Brand equity model.	27
3.2.2. Everybody knows the library, right?.	29
3.3. A brief overview of the Dutch library sector	30
3.3.1. Library governance and legislation in a nutshell	30
3.3.2. Network marketing challenges	31
3.4. Effective proximity requires awareness	32
3.5. Enhancing brand equity: the library national campaign strategy.	34
3.6. References	36
Chapter 4. Audience Behavior, Customer Journey and the Omnichannel Strategy	39
Arnaud DUFOUR
4.1. The digitalization of customer behavior	39
4.2. Understanding audiences better	42
4.3. The purchasing journey and its mapping	44
4.4. Towards an omnichannel experience.	46
4.5. Customer experience challenges	47
4.6. References	50

Part 2. The User of Books, Libraries and Museums: A Marketing Target Like Any Other	51
Chapter 5. Library Merchandising	53
Nicolas BEUDON
5.1. Merchandising	53
5.2. The arrival of merchandising in libraries	53
5.3. Merchandising techniques: another approach to library space	54
5.4. References	55
Chapter 6. Museum Marketing in Focus: Interview with Jean-Sébastien Belanger	57
Chapter 7. From Lectures to Saison.Culture: 40 Years of a Professional Cultural Journal in French-speaking Belgium	63
Jean-François FÜEG
7.1. First era	64
7.2. Second era	65
7.3. Third era	66
7.4. Fourth era	67
7.5. Fifth era	70
7.6. Not a conclusion	70
7.7. References	71
Chapter 8. Making Libraries Visible: A Cardinal Mission for Bibliosuisse	73
Amélie VALLOTTON-PREISIG
8.1. Bibliosuisse: the voice of Swiss libraries	73
8.2. Library marketing: a necessary evil	74
8.3. From marketing to advocacy.	75
8.4. How to promote libraries? Bibliosuisse actions, tools and campaigns	76
8.5. Challenges and obstacles	79
8.6. A job well done, but still a lot of work to be done	79
8.7. References	80
Chapter 9. Responsible (Digital) Marketing	81
Arnaud DUFOUR
9.1. Marketing and environmental emergency	81
9.2. What to do?	84
9.3. References	91

Part 3. Marketing: An Area of Investment for Library and Documentation Professionals	93
Chapter 10. From Marketing to Digital Marketing	95
Arnaud DUFOUR
10.1. Marketing and the digital transformation	95
10.2. Missions and activities of a digital marketing department.	96
10.2.1. Piloting the organization's digital ecosystem.	96
10.2.2. The need for a performance measurement system.	99
10.2.3. Charters and procedures to ensure consistency.	101
10.2.4. Crucial mastery of a technical foundation.	101
10.2.5. Classic managerial functions	103
10.2.6. Team and human resources	104
10.3. Current challenges in digital marketing	105
10.3.1. Websites	106
10.3.2. Newsletters.	107
10.3.3. Social media	108
10.3.4. Search engines.	109
10.3.5. Display and video advertising.	110
10.3.6. Web analytics	111
10.3.7. What about the future?	111
10.4. References.	113
Chapter 11. The Librarian–Information Specialist as a “Marketer”: What Skills and Training?	115
Véronique MESGUICH
11.1. The marketing function: multiple facets	115
11.2. Marketing: a forbidden term?	116
11.3. From public surveys to digital marketing: a wide range of skills	118
11.4. Skills outsourcing	121
11.5. Training and future perspectives for marketing in libraries and information centers	122
11.6. References.	124
Chapter 12. Marketing and Artificial Intelligence	125
Arnaud DUFOUR
12.1. Generative artificial intelligence for marketing	125
12.2. Very concrete applications	127
12.3. Effects on businesses	129

12.4. Broader issues	130
12.5. References.	131
Conclusion.	133
Jean-Philippe ACCART
Appendix. General Retrospective Bibliography	135
Glossary	139
List of Authors	143
Index	145