
Contents

Foreword	ix
Introduction	xiii
Chapter 1. From Term to Concept: the Entrepreneur and his Economic Function	1
1.1. Etymological and conceptual bases of the entrepreneur	1
1.2. The gradual recognition of the role of entrepreneurship	8
1.3. From a society of salary-earners to one of entrepreneurs?	9
1.4. Current definitions of entrepreneurship, or the institutional recognition of the entrepreneur	17
1.5. The plural entrepreneur	19
Chapter 2. Quantifying Entrepreneurship, Understanding the Entrepreneurial Role	21
2.1. Basic principles: the OECD's model	21
2.2. The main entrepreneurship indicators	24
2.2.1. Eurostat indicators	24
2.2.2. OECD and Eurostat indicators	24
2.2.3. Global Entrepreneurship Monitor indicators	25
2.2.4. World Bank indicators and the business climate	28
2.2.5. The official quantification of business creation in France: the Business Creation Observatory	29
2.3. The European Union's inclusive policy to promote entrepreneurship	30

2.4. Supporting entrepreneurship in developing countries: the ambitions of the United Nations (UN) and the United States	31
--	----

Chapter 3. Classical Economics of the Entrepreneur 35

3.1. Richard Cantillon: an economic agent with uncertain income	35
3.2. Anne Robert Jacques Turgot: the “progress” of the capitalist entrepreneur	36
3.3. François Quesnay, the manufacturing and commercial entrepreneur belongs to the sterile class	38
3.4. Pietro Verri and Cesare Beccaria, the inspiration for Jean-Baptiste Say?	38
3.5. Adam Smith: sympathy for initiative, but distrust of project creators	40
3.6. Jean-Baptiste Say: intermediary between scholar and laborer	42
3.7. Karl Marx, entrepreneur or officer of capital	46
3.8. Jean-Gustave Courcelle Seneuil, economist-entrepreneur or entrepreneur-economist?	47
3.9. The marginalists’ faux pas or Léon Walras’s ghost entrepreneur	51
3.10. Alfred Marshall, division of industry into entrepreneurial and managerial businesses	56
3.11. Werner Sombart and Max Weber, the entrepreneur or the spirit of capitalism	58
3.12. Joseph A. Schumpeter: the entrepreneur’s “new combinations of production factors”	60
3.13. John Maynard Keynes: the animal spirit of the entrepreneur.	65
3.14. From uncertainty to ignorance: Ludwig von Mises, Franck Knight and Friedrich Hayek	67
3.15. Creating or detecting opportunities?	69

Chapter 4. Contemporary Theories of the Entrepreneur 73

4.1. From entrepreneur to industrial economy	73
4.2. Ronald Coase, or the entrepreneur on the frontier of industrial economics	75
4.3. William Baumol, the entrepreneur and the Prince of Denmark	77

4.4. Mark Casson: entrepreneurship – an alternative to employment?	79
4.5. Scott Shane or the genetic theory of the entrepreneur	83
4.6. Entrepreneur, innovation, territory and social networks.	85
4.7. Mark Granovetter – from social integration to weighted networks.	88
4.8. Towards an evolutionist theory of the entrepreneur, or the heterogeneity of entrepreneurship	90
Chapter 5. Towards a Socioeconomics of the Entrepreneur: An Overview	93
5.1. The 13 keywords of the economics of the entrepreneur	93
5.2. On the entrepreneur’s personality: the player and the system	95
5.3. Resource potential and the social integration of the entrepreneur	100
5.4. Overall picture of the theory of the entrepreneur.	103
Conclusion	109
Bibliography	111
Index	123